

Skills

Personality is created by a person's talent. A creative person shows love for art and takes a personality that is molded around their skills. A genius usually keeps to him or herself. What about people who are said to have no personality? Do they have no talents? Artistic people are geniuses that cannot express their true talents.

If someone seems plain, maybe it is a lack of skills to express themselves with. What if someone is creative but lacks in writing and verbal skills? The personality would have no way to externally exist. This means that a personality can be trapped. There exists a path to the trap. In theory a person with no personality has a trapped personality. No personality is impossible to own.

